Ultimately, this led the boys to becoming leaders for their team and lifelong friends. The two boys showed that because they could change, the rest of the team could, too. Whether it was through the loss of old ways of thinking or the loss of friends who would not change, sacrifice became a pattern in producing change. Although it may be grievous, loss may, in turn, awaken the courage within us. Learning the lessons of the past allowed the Titans to move toward new possibilities of greatness.
